HOUSING RELATED ASSISTANCE

Ohio Valley Opportunities (OVO)

1172 Community Way, Scottsburg
752-7409

Homeownership Counseling/Down Payment Assistance Program— Future homebuyers may obtain assistance in learning how to shop for a home, including working with realtors, home inspections, etc.; obtaining a loan, including the application process, credit reports, types of mortgages, interest rates, down payments, etc.; the loan closing costs, the mortgage, deed and title insurance; and “life as homeowner”, including home maintenance/repair, taxes and insurance responsibilities, and how to be a good neighbor.

Section 8 Housing Assistance—This program enables eligible households to afford the cost of decent rental property.

Clients who are placed on this program are given a certificate or voucher that will enable them to recent decent, safe and sanitary housing. Each client must contribute 30% of their adjusted income toward rent and utilities. Section 8 subsidy pays the difference directly to the landlord, whose property must meet minimum standards and pass an inspection by a qualified OVO staff member. Annual reviews are made, and the subsidy is adjusted as families become more self-sufficient. The number of participants per county and the clients chosen for enrollment are determined by the Indiana Family & Social Services Administration. OVO administers this program locally through a contract with FSSA.

Section 8 Self-Sufficiency Program this program is available to individuals who receive section 8 assistance. The purpose of this voluntary program is taking the first step towards owning a home. A Family Development Specialist is available to assists families with becoming more self-sufficient. Services include but are not limited to family assessments, budgeting, information to improve earning power, etc. Individualized case management services help to guarantee the success of Section 8 Self-Sufficiency Participants.

Weatherization Program helps reduce the expense of energy consumption for low-income families, especially the elderly and disabled who much live on a fixed income. The installation of energy saving measures such as insulation, and the repair/replacement of inoperable or life threatening heating systems accompany education to the consumer about energy saving measures. OVO's Weatherization staff have received extensive training in this field, and can provide practical solutions. A limited number of families can be served each year, and a waiting list is maintained. Emergency (no heat) situations in below freezing weather, or when life threatening conditions exist receive priority.

Energy Assistance Program--- During the winter heating season this program can provide financial assistance to help low-income households meet the increased cost of heating their home. This program cannot pay the full cost of heating bills, nor can it pay connection fees. Payment is based on a matrix table, considering household size, type of hearing source, etc. Budgeting education is provided for those families needing to establish a payment plan to prevent disconnection. Energy saving advice is also provided to assist clients in reducing their heating costs. This program is especially helpful to the elderly and disabled, and those living on fixed incomes. Bulk fuel users are sometimes provided a “summer fill” while prices are reduced. A limited amount of funds are available during summer months to purchase air conditioners for the elderly or others with health problems necessitating air conditioning. EAP clients are referred for Weatherization when appropriate.

USDA Rural Development

656 S. Boatman Road, Scottsburg
752-2269 ext. 4

Rural Development (RD) is a branch of the Department of Agriculture, specializing in providing housing opportunities to individuals and families. Financing is provided with no down payment at interest rates as low as 1%, either with a direct loan through RD or a loan with a private financial institution, which is supported and guaranteed by RD. These loans are available for the purchase or construction of a dwelling for low or moderate income individuals or families.

Loans and grants are also for home improvement and repair. These 1% loans make it possible for low income rural homeowners to make necessary repairs to their homes and can also provide assistance in making homes accessible to individuals with disabilities. RD also offers grants to people 62 years of age or older, who may not be able to repay a standard loan, to remove health and safety hazards.

RD also offers Housing Preservation Grants, which enable low-income homeowners to repair and revitalize their homes. This program also provides property owners the ability to repair their units, provided that they agree to make such units available to low-income families.

Private nonprofit organizations may also make use of RHS Site Loans, which provide funding to buy adequate building sites for the development of a desirable rural community. Guaranteed loan programs also allow area businesses and industries the opportunity to save or create jobs in the community. Guaranteed loans are also set aside to promote the construction and maintenance of such community facilities as hospitals, police and fire stations, nursing homes, and schools. Detailed information on how to utilize the programs offered by Rural Development is available through your local USDA Rural Development offices.

USDA Rural Development

752-2269 ext. 4

Rural Development (RD) is a branch of the Department of Agriculture, specializing in providing housing opportunities to individuals and families. Financing is provided with no down payment at interest rates as low as 1%, either with a direct loan through RD or a loan with a private financial institution, which is supported and guaranteed by RD. These loans are available for the purchase or construction of a dwelling for low or moderate income individuals or families.

Loans and grants are also for home improvement and repair. These 1% loans make it possible for low income rural homeowners to make necessary repairs to their homes and can also provide assistance in making homes accessible to individuals with disabilities. RD also offers grants to people 62 years of age or older, who may not be able to repay a standard loan, to remove health and safety hazards.

RD also offers Housing Preservation Grants, which enable low-income homeowners to repair and revitalize their homes. This program also provides property owners the ability to repair their units, provided that they agree to make such units available to low-income families.

Private nonprofit organizations may also make use of RHS Site Loans, which provide funding to buy adequate building sites for the development of a desirable rural community. Guaranteed loan programs also allow area businesses and industries the opportunity to save or create jobs in the community. Guaranteed loans are also set aside to promote the construction and maintenance of such community facilities as hospitals, police and fire stations, nursing homes, and schools. Detailed information on how to utilize the programs offered by Rural Development is available through your local USDA Rural Development offices.
